

Nancy Moody

Vice President, Public Affairs
DTE Energy

Nancy J. Moody is chair of the DTE Energy Foundation and vice president of Public Affairs for DTE Energy. In addition to the Foundation, Moody has responsibility for all corporate social responsibility (CSR) work, including volunteerism, community outreach, neighborhood revitalization and the project management office for all other CSR activity. She also manages non-profit board service for senior leadership to maximize impact in the communities where DTE serves.

Moody spent much of her career with the company as director of the State Government Affairs office, responsible for advancing the company's interests on key public policy initiatives. She led electric industry efforts that culminated in comprehensive state energy policy laws enacted in both 2000 and 2008.

Moody later served as director of Federal Government Affairs, where she managed DTE's Washington D.C. office. In addition to her leadership as the company's primary liaison with members of Congress and the President's Administration, she represented DTE Energy on several national industry association policy committees, including those at the Edison Electric Institute, American Gas Association, Nuclear Energy Institute and the Interstate Natural Gas Association of America. Moody chaired the National Campaign for Home Energy Assistance and was the President of the Michigan Business Group in Washington, D.C.

Moody is an executive board member of the Michigan Economic Development Foundation and the Michigan Colleges Alliance. She serves on several other community organizations. Moody has been honored twice as the Child Advocate of the Year by statewide non-profit children's advocacy organizations.
